A journey without maps

■ Yogesh Gupta cycled 24, 000 kms through 31 countries for almost two years

SHIVANI GANESH
 NASHIK, APR 26

Yogesh Gupta, 32, says he was just a boy from Devlali who had never travelled more than a two-kilometre radius from his home. He did what he was told, studied at the prestigious MIT institute and later at Imperial College in London and became a petroleum engineer at Netherlands. Suddenly he was hit by an existentialist despair he says and wanted to find out what life meant and who he was. From a previous trip to South America he had found that a motorcycle was causing too many hassles at the customs in different countries. So on August 18, 2016, he started off on a six-year journey of self discovery on his simple city bike. The mission was to cycle to India through different countries but after Iran he was not allowed to travel through Pakistan. He did pick up a love for Iranian music and the language waiting for clearance but then he went on an epic detour: From Iran he went to Europe, Central Asia, Balkans, China, South Asian countries, his path just avoiding cities and zig-zagging and looping at will. He entered India at Myanmar and then began another 4,000 km journey. He went to Manipur, Assam and Meghalaya, then rode to Bangladesh and then came to Kolkata. Then he made his way across India to Nashik.

"Every country, every place is beautiful," he says, refusing to be pinned down by any favourites. "Basically my journey was inward. I questioned everything, why do we work, why do we live, why these borders between countries..." For two years almost he lived without a plan, cycling just 2 kms sometimes, sometimes 200 kms. He had no problems anywhere, everything was smooth and he was safe everywhere. "Initially my parents were worried about what I was doing. They would tell me 'come back, enough cycling,' but eventually they understood my wanderlust. Today they are proud of me when people are asking me to talk about my experiences, and felicitating me," he says. But he still has to work out this puzzle called life. "I want to tell kids to become rebels. They do not have to do something to please other people or parents. They must question everything," he says. April 27 is his birthday so he will be cycling to Devlali after addressing cycling enthusiasts in Nashik about his epic journey. "I don't like that question, what are your plans now," he laughs. No plans for him anymore, the journey is the thing.

Brief about the Program (Activity/Event)	A lecture on women's health &amp; hygiene was conducted by Dr. Manasi. She explained all the causes &amp; precautions regarding menstrual hygiene and health to the girl students. She unfolded the typical issues faced by young girls during menstrual cycle. This proved quiet helpful to girls speaking about a taboo subject clearly and openly. Dr. Manasi insisted that one should speak up and seek help if anything bothers her. She also suggested that a woman can lead a healthy life by implementing certain practises in her daily routine. She explained these minor routine changes in a simplistic way that appealed to girls and felt applicable.
Remarks	It was crucial to explain such taboo subjects and details to girl students.
