Brief about the (Activity/Event)	This year, the first-year architecture Rural settlement study was a pure Literature study. In the literature study, Students first analysed the settlement of various regions of India belonging to the different climatic zones like Leh Ladakh, Kutch, Villages from the North East part of India, Houses of Nagaland, Agraharas of South India, Kath Khuni Houses of Himachal Pradesh, Banglas of West Bengal, Havelis of Rajasthan, The Pal of Gujarat, Nalukettu of Kerala, Chawls of Mumbai, Wadas of Maharashtra and Chettinad Houses based upon the Socio- cultural background, Lifestyle, local construction techniques and materials. The architectural planning that evolved from the culture and occupational needs responded to the various climatic conditions was crucial to understand. Students studied the four settlements in Daman, Manali, Barmer and Goa exhibiting the different Climatic and geographical conditions. The settlements and residences in them were analysed on various parameters like climate, culture, demographics, construction style, materials, spatial Characteristics etc. All the four settlements that they studied had a diverse culture, context, topography, climate conditions, occupation, and architecture and so on, making them unique and different from everyday lives of our urban living.
Remarks	Due to the Covid Situation, students were unable to do the physical case study. Yet they comprehended the literature study very well. The analysis part was well delivered to the students as it was reflected into their work.

Brief about the (Activity/Event)	This year, the second-year architecture settlement study tour was taken to Mohadi, Nashik. The students documented the settlement of Mohadi, by understanding the local construction techniques and materials. Students were divided into groups and were asked to measure the houses and clusters along with public spaces like streets, chowks, temples and other community areas. Students got to learn about the socio- cultural life of the village and its reflection in the overall architectural planning along with the impact of local climatic conditions. Locally available stone and raw wooden logs largely govern architecture of the region. The old structures dominated the architecture of the village. The livelihood of the people was dependent on their everyday activities including few of the community run business like pottery and chulha making, cottage food industry such as pickles and papad making. Students were able to interact with the locals, understand their routine, the overall lifestyle and their needs. Students were fortunate to document few of the old structures which stood the testimony of time.
Remarks	Due to Covid restrictions, very less students were present for the field visit. Rest others did the literature case studies. Though conducting architectural site visit in the pandemic was a major challenge, yet it proved helpful and kept the enthusiasm of students high.

	– houses, streets, other relevant information about climate, culture etc. The students were asked to design a primary school for village kids on the identified site. This was a live project. After the design studio, the NGO representative and MR. Iyer reviewed the designs through a Jury. They selected one design of Nishant Kudekar to be built on site. This was great exposure for second year students.
Outcome	Students got a real-time exposure to experience the Rural Life in a particular Geographical & Climate Zone near Nashik. It was a real-time Design Competition which students enjoyed & learned a lot about Team-Work, Time-Management, Climate Responsive & economical Design, etc
